

Participants of the ILC Seminaries Conference in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, USA

World Seminaries Conference of the International Lutheran Council Discusses Lutheran Identity in a Changing World

Some 65 seminary professors and representatives from 24 countries gathered on the campus of Concordia Theological Seminary (CTS), Fort Wayne, Indiana, USA from 3 to 6 June 2010 as part of a world seminaries conference. A representative from the Ethiopian Evangelical Church Mekane Yesus (EECMY) attended this conference as a guest.

The conference, sponsored by the International Lutheran Council (ILC), was meeting for the fourth time under the theme "Confessional Lutheran Identity in the Light of Changing Christian Demographics."

The keynote speaker, Dr. Philip Jenkins of Pennsylvania State University, who has written several books on the state and future of Christianity, including The Next Christendom: The Coming of Global Christianity and The New Faces of Christianity: Believing the Bible in the Global South, set the scene by predicting trends in a global north to south shift in the center of gravity of Christianity. Dr. Jenkins sees this trend continuing to shape a very different picture of world Christianity from that which we currently recognize.

The second keynote speaker was Dr. Erní Seibert, a Lutheran pastor and theologian from Brazil, now serving as the Director for Communications for the Brazil Bible Society. He spoke on the topic of "Confessional Lutheran Identity in the Light of the Changing Christian Demographics."

Presenters from five continents addressed the topic from the perspective of their own continental experience. The aim of sharing this information was to help regions on each side of the demographic shift to prepare for, and to collaborate in, the training of pastors and church workers in light of their developing situation.

"This timely meeting brought together theological educators from all continents to start working together to propose strategies for meeting this great challenge," said Dr. Douglas L. Rutt, associate professor of Pastoral Ministry and Missions at CTS, chairman of the seminary relations committee of the ILC, and conference organizer.

In view of the interest in the topics being discussed at the ILC conference, two other groups asked to share in the keynote presentations and some of the subsequent discussions. The groups participating were the faculties of the two Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod (LCMS) seminaries and the theology departments of the Concordia University System, as well as a conference of church leaders from ILC and non-ILC countries who were meeting for consultations including preparations for celebration of the 500th anniversary of the Lutheran Reformation.

The seminary provided an ideal venue for this international meeting with its state-of-the-art facilities, pleasant surroundings and multilingual team providing simultaneous translation. In addition to participating in lively debate, delegates also had the opportunity to worship together in the Saarinen-designed Kramer Chapel on the seminary campus and to attend in Sunday services in several of the LCMS churches in Fort Wayne.

"In my opinion, it was a very successful conference and accomplished the purpose of the ILC in sponsoring these conferences - namely to promote confessional Lutheran theology and practice centering in Jesus Christ, both among member churches and throughout the world," said Dr. Samuel Nafzger, ILC executive director.

The conference was made possible by a grant from the Marvin M. Schwan Charitable Foundation to the ILC.

The International Lutheran Council (www.ilc-online.org) is a worldwide association of 34 established confessional Lutheran Churches united around the commitment to proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ on the basis of an unconditional commitment to the Holy Scriptures as the inspired and infallible Word of God and to the Lutheran Confessions contained in the Book of Concord as the true and faithful exposition of the Word of God.

Editorial from Dr. Gerald B. Kieschnick
Chairman, International Lutheran Council

The 2007 convention of The Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod (LCMS), USA, resolved that the LCMS Commission on Theology and Church Relations (CTCR) "in consultation with the Office of the President and our seminaries, coordinate fundamentally constructive and intentionally supportive efforts such as theological symposia, conferences, and other opportunities for study of confessional Lutheran theology, to uphold and nurture confessional Lutheranism," inviting members of the International

Dr. Gerald B. Kieschnick

Lutheran Council and others to participate.

Accordingly, a conference of confessional Lutheran leaders was held from 3 to 5 June 2010 on the campus of Concordia Theological Seminary in Fort Wayne, Indiana. The conference objectives were (1) to begin to assess the current situation of confessional Lutheranism in our world; (2) to cement further existing relationships with confessional Lutherans in this time of theological uncertainty; (3) to enable new relationships to develop between those committed to a strong confessional and biblical witness both nationally and internationally; and (4) to discuss appropriate ways to celebrate the upcoming 500th anniversary of the Reformation.

At the same time and place the ILC Fourth World Seminaries Conference was meeting under the theme "Confessional Lutheran Identity in a World of Changing Religious Demographics." Also meeting simultaneously were the members of the LCMS university and seminary theological faculties. All three groups met together the first day of the conference to hear plenary keynote speakers Dr. Philip Jenkins of the U.S. and Dr. Erni Seibert from Brazil.

Invited to the confessional leadership conference were the ILC chairman and the members of the ILC executive committee representing each of the five world areas, plus a representative from the theological commissions of Australia, Brazil and SELK, Germany, and members of the CTCR Executive Committee. Additionally, several guests from non-ILC confessional Lutheran churches were invited, including representatives from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the Ethiopian Evangelical Church Mekane Yesus, the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, and the Mission Province of Sweden. These participants were asked to provide assessments regarding the current state of confessional Lutheran theology in their churches and regions of the world.

As we continue to face the challenges of being confessional Lutherans in this second decade of the 21st century, it behooves us to work together as closely as possible in our God-given task of Gospel proclamation. Especially is this the case in light of decisions by others who bear the name "Lutheran" that threaten to weaken our witness to the Gospel.

In an appearance to Solomon, God said, "If my people who are called by my name humble themselves, pray, seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and heal their land" (2 Chron. 7:14).

May God bless our efforts at remaining faithful to our calling as confessional Lutherans. For our confessional Lutheran identity does not end with calling ourselves and each other to repentance, but also serves to strengthen our witness to broken people in a fallen world.

Confessional Leadership Conference and LCMS Theology Professors Conference in Fort Wayne

LCMS News 48 - by Roland Lovstad - Organized by the LCMS Commission on Theology and Church Relations, the International Confessional Leadership Conference sought to assess confessional Lutheranism and strengthen relationships among church bodies committed to a strong confessional and biblical witness. It was supported by a grant from Thrivent Financial for Lutherans.

Among the 20 participants of the conference, held from 2 to 6 June 2010, were representatives from member church bodies of the International Lutheran Council (ILC), as well as other church bodies and groups such as the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, USA, the Ethiopian Evangelical Church Mekane Yesus, the Mission Province of Sweden and Finland, and two pastors from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) who have expressed disagreement with recent ELCA decisions on same-gender relationships.

Eighty-nine theology professors from both LCMS seminaries and the ten Concordia colleges and universities attended the 2 to 4 June Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod (LCMS) Theology Professors Conference, where they heard scholarly presentations, discussed educational developments, and explored the implications of global Christianity for theological instruction in the United States.

"These few days provided a rare and historic opportunity for Lutheran leaders from around the world to address a critical topic and to establish and strengthen mutually-beneficial relationships," said Dr. Glen Thomas, executive director of the LCMS Board for Pastoral Education.

Ethiopian Church Head Meets With LCMS Leaders

Dr. Wakseyoum Idosa, center, president of the EECMY, meets with LCMS President Dr. Gerald B. Kieschnick, left, and Dr. Samuel H. Nafzger, LCMS director of church relations-assistant to the president.

A partnership agreement between their two churches was among items discussed when the president of the Ethiopian Evangelical Church Mekane Yesus (EECMY) met with Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod (LCMS) President Dr. Gerald B. Kieschnick and other LCMS leaders in St. Louis on 11 and 12 May this year.

Dr. Wakseyoum Idosa heads the 5.3 million-member EECMY, one of the fastest-growing Lutheran churches worldwide and, among those in Africa, second in size only to the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Tanzania.

Wakseyoum made his St. Louis stopover at the invitation of the Missouri Synod, during an extended visit to the United States. While in St. Louis, he also met with the LCMS President's Church Relations Cabinet and with representatives of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis.

The partnership agreement was signed on 22 January 2010 by EECMY and LCMS mission leaders in Addis Ababa, where the Ethiopian church body has its headquarters.

Dr. Samuel H. Nafzger, the LCMS's director of church relations-assistant to the president, said that agreement lays the groundwork for the two churches to work together in Africa in such areas as training for evangelistic outreach, food security, community health and education (including HIV/AIDS prevention), and "empowering marginalized groups."

"This agreement is not church fellowship," Nafzger emphasized, "but it does express the 'mutual hope that our work together will give us the opportunity to more fully realize our unity as Lutheran Christians so that on the basis of agreement in doctrine and practice, the two churches may share full altar and pulpit fellowship.'"

Nafzger added that "one of the areas that will have to be addressed is the question of the ordination of women pastors." He said that several of the EECMY's 21 synods (similar to LCMS districts) ordain women, and at present, 18 of that church body's 2 800 pastors are women.

Among areas where the EECMY and the Synod are already in agreement is opposition to same-sex marriage and to the positions of Lutheran church bodies that support such unions.

A press release from the EECMY reports that, in opening remarks at a meeting of his church body's executive board held from 7 to 10 April, Wakseyoum reaffirmed the EECMY position that same-sex marriage "is a clear disobedience to the Holy Scripture and ... God-ordained marriage."

The release also points out that the EECMY and other Lutheran church bodies in Africa in March reaffirmed a 2007 joint position they expressed against same-sex marriage.

News outlets reported on an 29 April statement posted on the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Tanzania's (ELCT) Web site to the effect that that church body would not accept money or help from groups that support same-sex marriage.

That reaffirmation and the ELCT statement are in advance of the Lutheran World Federation assembly, scheduled for 20 to 27 July 2010 in Stuttgart, Germany.

A joint release from Religion News Service and Ecumenical News International states that "homosexuality is expected to be a divisive issue" at that assembly.

Nafzger said that the agreement between the EECMY and the LCMS, as well as Wakseyoum's visit, are examples of "an increase in contacts with churches in Africa that have a deep appreciation for the solid scriptural stand The Lutheran Church -Missouri Synod has taken on this and other issues."

European ILC Churches Meet in Portugal

"Ethical questions of the 21st century in tension between Lutheran Confession and pastoral care" was the theme discussed by the Bishops and Presidents of the European churches belonging to the International Lutheran Council when they met from 1 to 3 June 2010 in Porto, Portugal.

Rev. Jonas R. Flor, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Portugal (IELP) and pastor of Emmanuel Congregation in Porto, which hosted the conference, welcomed the member- and guest churches from Belgium, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany, England, France, Latvia, Russia, Spain, and the USA.

In his keynote address, Bishop Hans-Jörg Voigt of the Independent Evangelical Lutheran Church (SELK) in Germany emphasized that ethical questions gain significance for the churches in the postmodern and post-Christian society as the Church loses its role in spiritual leadership more and more. But ethical questions must not conceal the proclamation of the gospel. One of the key-issues, therefore, is the acknowledgment of the authority of the Bible and the Lutheran Confessions "because" they are in accordance with holy Scripture.

In further papers, the situation of the Anglican church family and the churches belonging to the Lutheran World Federation (LWF) were presented. Especially African churches question the West-European churches about their critical relation to the Bible in contrast to a "respectful" acceptance of holy Scripture.

The participants of the conference also reported about the situation in their respective churches.

Jean Thiébaud Haessig, president of the ELC, pastors and lay-members of confessional Lutheran churches from Belgium, Denmark, Germany, England, France, Portugal and Spain talked about the unique possibilities and challenges of mission work within the neighborhood of a congregation,

Planners Begin Work on Wittenberg Attraction

LCMS News Reporter online - "We are a significant step closer to creating a world-class attraction in Wittenberg, Germany, that will very clearly present the Gospel to tens of thousands of people - or more - every year through the story and theology of Martin Luther," Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod (LCMS) missionary Rev. David L. Mahsman said after a two-day creative-planning meeting on 24 and 25 June 2010 in Wittenberg.

Plans are being developed for an "interactive, immersive museum or discovery center" in the city most closely associated with Luther. It is expected to draw Wittenberg-area residents, visitors and tourists from around the world, he said.

Mahsman was sent to Wittenberg in September 2009 to develop a plan for ministry in Wittenberg. He is managing director of the International Lutheran Society of Wittenberg (ILSW), which was established by the LCMS, Concordia Publishing House and Germany's Independent Evangelical Lutheran Church (SELK) to work in Wittenberg.

"The story we want to tell, centers on the clarity of the Gospel that Martin Luther rediscovered in Wittenberg," said Dr. Samuel H. Nafzger, chairman of the ILSW board. Nafzger, who is also director of church relations in the LCMS Office of the President, was one of the participants in the creative meeting.

LCMS Vice-President-Finance/Treasurer Tom Kuchta, who also participated, added, "We have strong Lutheran theologians and historians involved, but the story will be told in a way that is easily understood by every visitor."

The two-day meeting was led by staff from BRC Imagination Arts, which Mahsman said is "probably the world leader in developing interactive museums and educational and cultural attractions."

Participants also included Dr. Paul L. Maier, LCMS second vice president and professor of ancient history at Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo; Dr. Erik Herrmann, assistant professor of historical theology at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis; SELK Bishop Hans-Jörg Voigt; SELK mission director Rev. Roger Zieger; Dr. Wilhelm Torgerson, retired ILSW managing director; Dr. Martin Treu, curator of Wittenberg's Lutherhaus museum; Wittenberg Oberbürgermeister (Lord Mayor) Eckhard Naumann and mayoral aide Arne Lietz, whose assignments include tourism-related issues.

"This has exciting potential," Dr. Paul Maier said of the project. With the approach of the 500th anniversary of the Reformation in 2017, he said, the Wittenberg project has "the confluence of location, the anniversary and the centrality of what happened here. This is where the Reformation began, and the project is a way to celebrate it properly."
